

Appalachian Rivers III Conference

The U.S. Department of Energy's National Energy Technology Laboratory (NETL) and The WMAC Foundation invites you to attend its Appalachian Rivers III Conference on October 4-5, 2000, at the National Energy Technology Laboratory in Morgantown, West Virginia.

This two-day conference will provide time for papers, panel discussions, new technology exhibits, and your input as to what technology and technology applications you would like to see made available to monitor and analyze watersheds.

Appalachian Rivers is a unique conference where manufacturers, researchers, academicians, industry, government agency representatives, watershed stewards, and administrators from many different disciplines come together annually to examine:

The spectrum of state-of-the-art technology and methodology available for watershed monitoring, assessment, and restoration.

Emerging technologies with potential impacts on watershed ecosystem applications.

Transferring existing, related technologies to the study of stream systems and watersheds.

New technologies required to meet stakeholders' needs and solve new problems.

The hope is that this format will accelerate the development and application of watershed-relevant technologies, which in turn will expedite understanding, problem mitigation, and the preservation of watershed ecosystems.

We look forward to seeing you at the conference.
